

SEN ASSIST

Here at The LIME, through our work with Sony, Crick Software, and of course our charity ICT4Autism we are strong believers in the benefits of using technology to assist children with Special Educational Needs.

We were extremely pleased therefore when we were approached by Adele from SENassist. Adele said "My class have autism and severe learning difficulties and yet can do so much on the computer. They can access what they want to on the internet because they are so motivated. This can be problematic with autistic children who have learnt they can do what they want on the computer, but get 'stuck' on a limited number of things. My aim is to train children from an early stage to complete activities on the computer independently. If we can harness this interest and skill we can develop so many other skills. In the long run I hope our software will lead to more children with autism being able to enter the workplace.

The sad current statistic is that just 15% of autistic adults are in full time employment. Our software is ideal for the touch screen computer as all the buttons are click and click rather than click and drag.

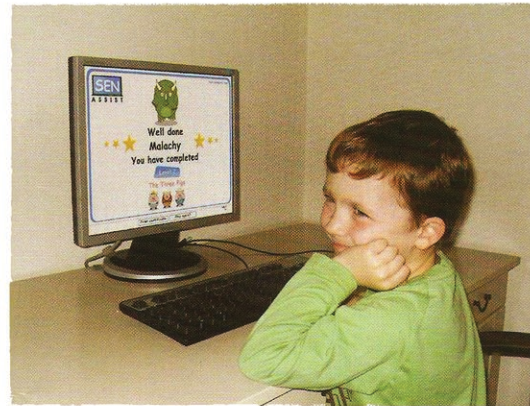

Adele very kindly donated her 'The Three Pigs' software to ICT4Autism to be donated alongside the machines given away (big thanks Adele).

We have now run the software on a number of (32 bit) Windows based computers and found it to be remarkable software which is both intuitive and instructive. The on screen rewards seem to be extremely motivating to a child user. The fun graphics and voices make for hours of entertainment and engagement.

In my role as Technical Director for ICT4Autism I undertake many reviews and trials in order to ensure that any software we use is fit for purpose and I have absolutely no hesitation in recommending SENassist software.

On a technical note, SENassist offer an online version which is accessed via their website, this is suitable for machines running a 64 bit version of Microsoft Windows.
